Dear Labor:

I am writing this letter in opposition to the proposed rule of DOL which will restrict the selling of options in an IRA account.

I am retired and successfully trade in options using a small percentage of my estate to supplement my income and as a satisfying hobby. Prior to trading options, I was required by my broker to be qualified based on my trading experience and wealth. As a mentally stable and sufficiently suitable person to psychologically evaluate and accept the risks involved in these activities, I consider the new rules regarding trading options in an IRA account another government intrusion into my private matters.

Please reconsider and revise this pending rule to eliminate this burdensome provision.

Sincerely,

Mr. David Smith
